November and December are exciting months in Miami and South Florida. However, after Hurricane Irma, I would be remiss if I didn't mention the impact that the storm had in our beloved community and the heartbreaking devastation to our neighbors in the Florida Keys and the Caribbean. Miami's lush canopy may be leaner, some of our businesses had unplanned makeovers and others shuttered, but together we've worked tirelessly to recover from Irmageddon. And we are ready for the holidays, Art Basel and Miami Art Week festivities. Let the good times roll!

J. STEVEN MANOLIS

WHAT ART CRITICS AND HISTORIANS ARE SAYING...

"There's so much well-made but facile, unfelt abstraction around these days that it can come as a shock to be confronted by the real stuff. And that's what J. Steven Manolis unfailingly provides. Each and every piece generates an energy, which is at once explosively physical and evidence of a mind at work. Like the birth of a world."

ANTHONY HADEN-GUEST

British-American writer and art critic
The New Yorker, Vanity Fair, Slade Business Journal
New York and London

"As an art journalist and curator, I have observed with considerable amazement the meteoric ascension of J. Steven Manolis' professional reputation and accomplishments, critical acclaim and outstanding recognizable work. When you combine natural born talent, superb instruction, burning ambition and a flare for dramatic and singular eye-popping color compositions, the recipe has, not surprisingly, produced an obvious winner!"

BRUCE HELANDER

Former Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs, Rhode Island School of Design, and former White House Fellow of the National Endowment for the Arts

"J. Steven Manolis is a modern master; more particularly, a modernist, as his masterful responsiveness to his medium indicates, and with that an abstract expressionist."

DONALD KUSPIT

Renowned Art Critic and Historian
New York City

"J. Steven Manolis is one of the foremost practitioners of Abstract Expressionism today, his brilliant brushstrokes as bewitching as those of AbEx forefather Clyfford Still (originally from North Dakota). Manolis' REDWORLD is a display of passion, productivity and powerful technique."

ELIZABETH SOBIESKI

Former Contributing Editor, The Art Economist; Arts writer, The Huffington Post, Cosmopolitan
New York and Los Angeles

"J. Steven Manolis, following in the path of his teacher, the great colorist Wolf Kahn, uses color ebulliently and expressively in his abstract compositions. Small paintings spur his imagination and initiate his large-scale watercolor and acrylic paintings. Manolis' work evokes the spirit of nature and a life in which color matters."

ANNETTE BLAUGRUND, PHD

Independent Curator
Former director of the National Academy Museum

EYE CANDY

Stay among museum-worthy art collections

BEYOND A WELL-RESTED VACATION or staycation, hotels nowadays house some of the most impressive art collections. The all-suite boutique Sagamore Hotel (1671 Collins Ave., 305.535.8088) on South Beach, known as "the art hotel," in many ways is like a museum and the first in Miami to embrace the concept. The property is well-known for its extensive, revolving art collections, from the 331-pound Giant Blue Baby Foot by artist Idan Zareski that sits at the hotel's front door to its Art Deco exterior and its Miami Art Week brunch in December. Other hotels catering to art aficionados include the Hotel Beaux Arts (255 Biscayne Blvd., 305.421.8700) where art and design form part of the Autograph Collection brand DNA, and every suite resembles a New York City gallery, to the W hotels (2200 Collins Ave., Miami Beach 485 Brickell Ave.) with guided art walks by W Insiders and concierge staff.

More spots to get your art fix

Hotel Beaux Arts

From the check-in desk to the L'Atelier Lounge on the 39th floor, guests are greeted by magnificent sculptures and three-dimensional works at every turn.

W Miami

The work of Brazilian born mixed-media artist Tiago Magro colors the walls of W Miami's 50th floor rooftop, Whisper Cocktail Lounge and Wet Deck.

W South Beach

This posh hotel is home to an exclusive multi-million dollar art collection that includes works from Andy Warhol and Jean-Michel Basquiat.

New shops, food hall and art at Aventura Mall

THE MALL EXPANSION TREND throughout South Florida continues. This time is Aventura Mall's turn. "Our vision is to create a new gathering place," says Jackie Soffer, co-chair and CEO of Turnberry Associates, owner and manager of Aventura Mall. The mall's expansion adds a three-level, 315,000 square-foot wing on the east side of the property, including the first Miami store for British brand Topshop Topman, fashion giant Zara, Italian fine jeweler Pomellato and athleisure company Under Armour, among others. In addition, the city's first food hall will open here with local favorites Tap 42, CVI.CHE 105, Pubblelly Sushi, Harry's Pizzeria, Serafina and Blue Bottle Coffee. A new VIP Lounge, a large-scale glass wall and a continuous 350-foot skylight are other key design elements. 19501 Biscayne Blvd., Aventura, 305.935.1110, aventuramall.com

Food Hall

Located on the third level, the food hall will provide plenty of communal seating, including swings, banquettes and shared bar tables.

Experiential Art

"Aventura Slide Tower" by Carsten Höller, a monumental, nearly 93-foot tubular sculpture that you can slide in awaits at the new porte-cochere.

Cultural Hotspots

Miami's cultural scene gains momentum with new art spaces

By Rebecca McBane

EACH YEAR IN DECEMBER, art collectors and cultural connoisseurs descend upon Miami for Art Basel—the world's largest art gathering—and Miami Art Week. Beyond these must-attend events, Miami is also home to a variety of art museums showcasing established and emerging artists, as well as the Wynwood Art District, a renowned destination for street art. When you visit this year, there's more than art fairs to see. Two of Miami's art museums recently completed expansions and in the case of the Institute of Contemporary Art, Miami, a much anticipated permanent home.

ICA MIAMI

The idea of promoting Miami as a place that not only exhibits great art, but also produces it, is what drives Ellen Salpeter, arts leader and director of the Institute of Contemporary Art, Miami (ICA Miami).

"I feel like Miami needs to stake its claim as a site of cultural production," explains Salpeter.

"We have a lot of artists here and the museums are making culture happen. It was really important for us to open up with a strong commitment to cultural production and to tell stories about how artists work in their studios and how that either responds to, or more often, predicts trends in larger society," says Salpeter.

Since 2014, the museum has operated out of the Miami Design District's Moore Building on Second Avenue, while its new facility was in construction. About the Design District Salpeter says, it's an "evolving neighborhood where art and style and design and fashion all come together." A vibe the museum cherishes and plans on maintaining given that its new facility opening December 1, will be located next door to the Moore Building at 61 NE 41st St. With The de la Cruz Collection also on 41st Street, together these institutions will anchor the area with contemporary art.

Designed by Madrid-based firm Aranguren & Gallegos Arquitectos, the 37,500-square-foot building, features three floors of exhibition space and a 15,000-foot sculpture garden.

An impressive lineup of exhibitions will debut with the opening. "The Everywhere Studio" (Dec. 1-Feb. 26, 2018) presents a one-of-a-kind survey of 100 works in painting, sculpture, video and installation, from the great masters—Pablo Picasso, Yves

Klein and Andy Warhol, among others—as well as artists from the post-war period and present day.

The museum's ground-floor and rotating exhibitions include selections from its permanent collections and commissions.

Six new large-scale sculptures in the museum's outdoor sculpture garden will feature the work of Pop artist George Segal, on long-term loan from the Martin Z. Margulies Collection, Miami-based artist Mark Handforth, and other post-war and contemporary artists.

THE BASS

Across Biscayne Bay and in Miami Beach, The Bass, a contemporary art museum housed in a 1930s Art Deco building, has reopened after a two-year renovation period.

The expansion which includes the addition of four galleries, museum shop, café and dedicated education facility, allows the museum the opportunity to display items beyond its permanent collection and to increase the "capacity to bring more artists and projects," according to Leilani Lynch, assistant curator at The Bass.

While ICA Miami is known for featuring emerging artists, The Bass focuses on established, mid-career talent.

The museum's opening season will include solo shows by Ugo Rondinone ("good evening beautiful blue"), Pascale Marthine Tayou ("Beautiful") and Mika Rotenberg's self-titled exhibition.

The artists were carefully selected to "reflect The Bass' commitment to presenting international contemporary art by established and mid-career artists," says Silvia Karman Cubiñá, executive director and chief curator at The Bass.

Hitting the Right Note

Miami-native Chrissie Fit reprises her role in "Pitch Perfect 3."

By Susan B. Barnes

Photography by Isaac Arjonilla

CHRISSIE FIT, who reprises her role on-screen as Florencia "Flo" Fuentes in "Pitch Perfect 3" when it hits theaters Dec. 22, has described her character as brave and hard-working, characteristics that certainly apply to the Miami native.

As a little girl growing up in Hialeah, Chrissie watched her mom and aunts sing harmonies at family gatherings and parties with her grandfather, a guitarist who played in different bands and clubs in Cuba before emigrating to the United States. "I would see them and want to be a part of the group, too—pre-Destiny's Child," Chrissie says with a laugh.

In the fifth grade, she yearned to try out for a play, "La Gitana" (the Gypsy) but when asked to be included, she was denied. Rather than taking "no" for an answer, she went home and read the script.

"I realized there wasn't a bad girl (in the script). Watching all those telenovelas (soap operas) with my mom, I knew there had to be a bad girl," Chrissie recalls. "I went to Mrs. Sanchez (the teacher), and said, 'There isn't a bad girl; can I be the bad girl?'"

"She put me in the show! I basically created and wrote this character, and that was my first taste of acting," she adds. "I thought, 'Oh my God! This is great.' And I was hooked."

Chrissie, who describes Miami as a city with "a culture that is so rich with people from all over the world," says that her family was very supportive from the beginning, and that she had a very good environment in which to grow and learn.

"I think that being in Miami where the population is mostly Latino, I got to play so many roles I may not have been able to in other places—Juliet in 'Romeo and Juliet,' Serena in 'Fame.' Maybe I wouldn't have been able to (play these roles) if I was someplace else. I thought that's how it was—whoever was best for the job got it."

"I'm grateful that I got to learn and explore this craft in a place that didn't look at your exterior, but gave you an opportunity [to] play any role, regardless of the way you look," she adds.

Now based in Los Angeles, Calif., Chrissie comes home to Miami as often as she can.

Her entire family lives in Miami. "I have two nephews there—they're at that age where everything they do is hilarious. I need to go to Miami to get my Cuban food fix every so often," she explains.

Though she has yet to show her "Pitch Perfect 3" cast mates around her hometown, she relishes the thought of her friends experiencing the city "the way that I do it."

"We would of course, do all the fun South Beach stuff, but I would like to take them beyond the beach. Hang out in Hialeah with my family, bar hop at The Grove, get some pastelitos (Cuban pastries) at Vicky's Bakery, play some dominos at Maximo Gomez Park in Little Havana. Oh man, I would love to see Rebel Wilson in Little Havana," she says.

So what's next for Chrissie Fit? She says she's taking a break to develop some of the projects she's been writing and wants to produce.

"The best way to influence this industry is to get behind the scenes and create more stories that resonate with women, and Latinas specifically."

MAKING IT BIG

Along with the Pitch Perfect franchise, Chrissie is also known for her role as CheeChee in Disney Channel's Original Movie franchise "Teen Beach Movie" and has appeared in such television series as "General Hospital," "Southland," "House M.D.," "The Middleman" and MTV's "Mary + Jane." Make-up provided by Chechel Joson.

Gangster's (Tropical) Paradise

Prohibition, Miami's past and killer cocktails

By Michelle Khouri

THE WAVES CRASHING on the shore could have been made of rum. Residents of the newly incorporated City of Miami voted to enact Prohibition in 1913, seven years before it became a national constitutional ban. Almost immediately, South Florida's coastline became a catwalk for rum-runners. Today, talk of prohibition has a far-reaching allure perhaps triggered by the mystery of shadowy figures in basement bars and the glorified danger of illicit dealings.

RUM-RUNNING PAST

Prohibition era doesn't typically conjure images of swamplands and palm trees. Rather, countless TV shows and films frame this Golden Age of Bootlegging as a time when pinstriped gangsters clutching Tommy guns showered cosmopolitan streets with bullets and blood. Including, of course, Al Capone.

Al Capone in fact moved to Miami in 1927, enamored by the thriving (rum-running) industry, warm climate and distance from the rising risks he faced back home. He lived in his Palm Island mansion for six years before being imprisoned in 1932. Once released, Capone spent the last few years of his life back in South Florida.

"To locals, Al Capone was a celebrity of sorts. There was almost a sense of pride in Capone calling Miami home," says Dr. Paul George, resident historian at HistoryMiami Museum and a revered Miami expert.

"By and large, you had a place where you really could hide out, especially in the '20s, out of the watchful eye of the kind of big-city newspapers and spotlight of a place like Chicago, for example," says Emmy and Peabody Award-winning filmmaker Billy Corben, who is a Miami native and lifelong resident.

"Out in the swamp, you could get away with literally anything," Corben says.

And yet, Miami's history as a booming rum-running capital, has somehow remained largely washed out to sea.

The moment Miamians sought to outlaw spirits, they unknowingly flaunted the region's natural potential as a bootlegger's paradise. "We have thousands of miles of seemingly endless shoreline because we're a peninsula. Not to mention all the hundreds of islands and keys immediately offshore, so you can get in and out real quick by boat," explains Corben.

Over a century later, Prohibition's influence is making itself known in the most appropriate of places—behind the bar.

Randy Perez is the beverage and events director for Bar Lab, a hospitality consulting group that owns some of Miami's hottest restaurants and bars, including Broken Shaker, 27 Restaurant and The Anderson. Perez explains why Prohibition-inspired cocktails took over drink menus to begin with: "Prohibition-style cocktails came into Miami right when cocktails started to become relevant. Like in life, you have to know where you've been before you can go anywhere. It's the same when you develop cocktails."

But how do you draw inspiration from cocktail recipes of a time when spirits were banned? Especially when that ban left a terrible taste in imbibers' mouths ... literally.

When Prohibition became law, alcohol aficionados turned to making their own booze, and so "bathtub gin" was born. "When they made this gin, it wasn't refined. It wasn't anything like it used to be," says Perez, who is a skilled mixologist. Simply put, this gin was no joy to drink.

According to Perez, cocktails came into favor when the need arose to mask the taste of the spirits. Thus, the sudden rise of mixers, bitters and garnishes.

To sample how bartenders are reimagining Prohibition cocktails in the modern world, belly up to the bar and ask for a variation of an Old Fashioned, Sidecar or Gin Rickey. In addition to Bar Lab's three properties, Perez recommends making stops at Sweet Liberty, Repour Bar, The Matador Room and Upland.

"Miami doesn't really have that underground bar with the hidden entrance," says Perez, bearing sad news for anyone in search of a modern-day speakeasy. "I think that's the only thing Miami's really missing—that tucked-away spot that takes you like 30 minutes to find."

OAK BARREL-AGED SAZERAC RECIPE

INGREDIENTS

- 2oz Rye whiskey
- .25oz Fermented black cherry reduction
- Absinthe rinse
- 3 dashes of Peychaud's Bitters

Bar Lab shares its recipe for oak barrel-aged Sazerac, which is a modern twist on the classic Prohibition cocktail. The process starts by barrel aging fermented black cherry Sazerac for six months in recycled Sherry oak barrels. Then, the Sazerac is sealed in a plexiglass container and surrounded with salt, rich soil and seasonal spices. This helps to recreate the aging process of Islay Scotch whiskey. It's the way they use what they've learned from Prohibition "to revitalize and push the boundaries to recreate the past," says Randy Perez.

NEIGHBORHOODS AVENTURA

Aventura is an enclave of tropical landscaping and water, surrounding sleek high-rises, luxurious single-family homes and diversions for all. Majestic palms and shade trees line the roadways, and colorful flowers cover the medians of Aventura Boulevard and Country Club Drive, which sweeps around an exquisitely manicured, 18-hole golf course in the heart of the city.

BAL HARBOUR

This exclusive and secluded village is South Florida's glamour and fashion capital. An oasis of pampering and privilege, located at Miami Beach's northern tip. The Village has the highest concentration deluxe oceanfront hotels, resorts, opulent condo residences and an enviable shopping and dining scene.

BOCA RATON

This "Pink City" is known for its combination of natural beauty, history and sophisticated shopping and cultural amenities. Boca's natural beauty is on display at the Gumbo Limbo Environmental Complex, with its outdoor aquariums and pristine hammock along the Intracoastal Waterway.

COCONUT GROVE

"The Grove" is known for tree-lined streets and architectural points of interest from old houses of coral rock to gracious homes, cottages and historic churches. Locals come from all over to dine at the many restaurants, from sidewalk eateries to candlelit dining rooms, or to browse in art galleries and interesting shops. Drop by CocoWalk, just to find out what the street artists and entertainers are up to. Vizcaya, the jewel in the city's crown, is filled with art treasures, 10 formal gardens and a preserved natural setting.

DELRAY BEACH

Dubbed "The Village by the Sea," this town lives up to its name. You'll find a friendly, small-town vibe combined with smart, big-city sophistication. After a day at Delray's beautiful beaches, stroll through the quaint downtown or check out the revived Pineapple Park neighborhood.

DOWNTOWN MIAMI

This four-square mile area is where you can appreciate the city's humble beginnings and first-class leisure activities. Flagler Street is the downtown's historic retail area and home to Olympia Theater, a magnificent performing arts center that dates back to 1926. Biscayne Boulevard, downtown Miami's main thoroughfare parallel to Biscayne Bay, is lined with residential projects, sidewalk cafés and retail stores. The urban center is home to the American Airlines Arena where the Miami Heat play, plus PortMiami, and the Phillip and Patricia Frost Museum of Science too.

FT. LAUDERDALE

Known as "the Venice of America" for its network of rivers and canals, Fort Lauderdale is one of the world's yachting capitals. If you're heading out on a cruise ship, you'll leave from the busy port here. Las Olas Boulevard is the heart of Fort Lauderdale, but it's only part of the city. Visit the famous beachfront, and enjoy a slice of undeveloped paradise at Hugh Taylor Birch State Park. Or hit one of the many stellar restaurants and bars along 17th Street or Sunrise Boulevard.

HOLLYWOOD

A visit to Hollywood means learning about the "Broadwalk" and the circles. The Broadwalk is a paved, beachfront walkway that separates the sand from the shops and restaurants that provide a low-key hangout. A mile or so inland from the Broadwalk, the restaurants and bars around Young Circle bustle at night.

KEY BISCAYNE

This seven-mile-long and two-mile-wide barrier island is known for its pristine beaches, outdoor activities and relaxed, small-town lifestyle. The island town includes 1,800 acres of natural parkland and is a water lovers paradise with a wide array of activities, including wind-surfing, kayaking, sailing and paddle boarding.

LITTLE HAVANA

A neighborhood of Miami considered the epicenter of Cuban culture and heritage. This famed street is well-known for hosting a variety of events including the annual Calle Ocho festival, monthly Viernes Culturales (Cultural Fridays) celebration the last Friday of the month and more.

SOUTH BEACH

Occupying less than two square miles on the tip of Miami Beach, South Beach has its own claim to fame. The area's Art Deco District is globally recognized as one of Miami's unique attractions. The beaches are thronged with sexy, beautiful people. When the sun goes down, South Beach's Club scene goes into high gear as crowds head for the action of the city's number one zone of no holds-barred bacchanals.

WEST PALM BEACH

This is a city that loves its waterfront, as the miles of sidewalks and bike lanes along the Intracoastal Waterway attest. It's also a town that loves a good time. SunFest in May is West Palm Beach's biggest party, but far from the only one. The party's always on at CityPlace and other nightlife hotspots at Clematis Street. There's also plenty to do for art lovers including world-renowned museums and picturesque districts like Antique Row and Northwood Village.
