ASK THE EXPERT

Dr. Valerie Giraud

CO-FOUNDER, PRESIDENT
ANTONYM COSMETICS

Q: Tell us a bit about your line.

A: As a makeup artist, I wanted to have a “greener and cleaner” kit, I decided to develop a color line with certified natural and organic ingredients that offers strong performance and strong pigments.

Q: Share one beauty tip for visitors to Miami.

A: The basic advice is to stay hydrated. Always. Humidity opens the pores, so it's important to cleanse the skin, as open pores collect more dirt. A gentle wash and a hydrating cream are super important. Also, Miami has so much sun—which ages the skin... so putting on a strong SPF is really important.

Q: Do you have any products that speak to these suggestions?

A: Our baked foundations are great because they start as a light cream and are then baked into powders, but retain the properties of the cream, so they are very light on the skin and don't clog pores. They are also made with a plant-based natural moisturizer, which helps the skin stay supple.

Q: What are your top 5 products you HAVE to have with you when traveling?

A: A refillable water bottle, One Love Organics Coconut Water Cream, Eir NYC Surf Mud for sun protection, Anonym Lola Lash 2 Mascara and Anonym Cheek Crush Highlighting Blush.

Q: Where do you live, and where is the line based?

A: I live in—and the Anonym office is in—Hollywood. It's a great South Florida town, with a great beach and central location. I love it.

EDITOR'S NOTE

March/April 2018

Springtime in Miami is like no place else on Earth. No, I'm not referring to the heat wave that's about to ensue. I'm referring to the last two months of a glorious winter season. Many tourists and seasonal Miamians are still visiting our fair city, but no longer in massive hordes. This is great news for visitors and locals alike.

It's perfect timing for exploring all this area has to offer, including our favorite riverside locales (page 18), hidden-gem shopping destinations (page 64), and the best steakhouses (page 20) and Cuban restaurants (page 26) around—both brand new and established favorites.

After two decades of being a seasonal South Florida gal, I recently moved to Miami (Coconut Grove, to be exact) fulltime and am thrilled to be the editor who guides you through the Magic City and beyond. We can discover and rediscover the county together! Please keep in touch on Instagram (@ericacorsano).

RIVER GODS

Hot venues along the Miami River

ALL THE COOL KIDS in Miami like to play along the River, and Kiki on the River is one of their favorite playgrounds. The indoor-outdoor venue is helmed by nightlife pro Roman Jones and industry-vet chef Steve Rhee, who want you to feel like you're escaping to the Greek islands. Enjoy your meal in Kiki's romantic garden lounge, where on weekends a debauchorous brunch party ensues. Your meal will begin with Pikilia (Greek spreads) that include a carp roe, garlic almond and roasted baby eggplant. Move on to shared plates and salads, an extensive raw bar and perfectly sized main dishes. Menu highlights include grilled whole Mediterranean sea bass and a half-rack of baby-back pork ribs. 450 NW North River Drive, Miami, 786.502.3243, kikiontheriver.com

EAT

WHERE'S THE MEAT?

Salt Bae's new Miami outpost

WHEN WORD GOT OUT that “Salt Bae” was to open a Miami steakhouse, Nusr-Et, the social media set lost their virtual minds. To add to the hysteria, the Insta-famous, salt-flicking celebrity chef/butcher Nusret Gökçe spent the first few weeks at the restaurant cutting meat tableside, posing for selfies and, ofcourse, flicking salt on various meat dishes. He’s even got celebs like DJ Khaled, Diddy and Rihanna digging his flick and signature dishes like Beef Chop with Mustard Sauce, Cheesy Meatballs, Smoked Beef and Barbecued Turkish Sausage. Whether you subscribe to the hubbub or not, one thing’s certain: When it comes to delicious meat, the handsome Turkish butcher delivers. DRINK

SIP + SAVOR

Cognac is the "it" spirit of 2018

NO LONGER ONLY A SPIRIT TO BE SIPPED slowly by your grandfather, Cognac is being touted by many as the spirit of 2018. One of the original cocktail spir- its, it's a type of brandy made from double-distilled white wine from grapes grown in the Cognac region of France (duh). Area hot spots have confirmed that interest in the tasty brown liquor is on the rise. Sip it at Eau Palm Beach Resort and Spa, which serves Hardy on its International Flight menu, and Brickell's Komodo—they blend Hennessy with citrus, yuzu agave, Berentzen cherry liquor and grapefruit juice in their Cherry Blossom cocktail ($17). Komodo, 801 Brickell Ave, 305.534.2211, komodomiami.com

Try Cognac at Home

When paired with the right ingredients, Cognac is a delightful new addition to our imbibing lineup. "Cognac certainly has the potential to play a much larger role in the industry than it has in the past. It's for people that appreciate a more sophisticated spirit." - Ryan Zemel, general manager at Fort Lauderdale's Terra Mare.

Recipe: Aunt Mary at Terra Mare:
1.5 oz. Remy Martin VSOP
.75 oz. Chambord
.5 oz. lemon juice
.5 oz. ginger syrup
Splash of champagne
Serve over large ice cubes in a rocks glass and garnish with a lemon twist.

Eating Cuban

From rice and beans to guava, citrus and cilantro, explore the delicious flavors of Miami's Cuban cuisine.

By Olee Fowler and Susan Bryant

Cuban cuisine has even made its impact on the unlikelyst of spots.

With the national spotlight on Cuba these days, many people have greater cravings for a Cuban sandwich, “pastelito” (pastry) or “cafecito” (coffee).

“When people come here, they want to eat at a Cuban restaurant,” says chef Michael Beltran, co-owner of the New American-meets-New World Ariete in Coconut Grove. “It’s like going to New York and getting matzo-ball soup. It’s a deep-rooted culture here. You see it on every corner of Miami. Versailles, La Carreta and La Palma are Miami institutions. Versailles does home-style Cuban to the max.”

Versailles, which opened the gateway in 1971, still makes national headlines. It introduced the traditional cuisine of Spanish, African and Caribbean influences to Americans and serves as a cultural epicenter for Miami’s Cuban community.

But a slew of new Cuban restaurants arriving in South Florida have given the cuisine a spin of their own.

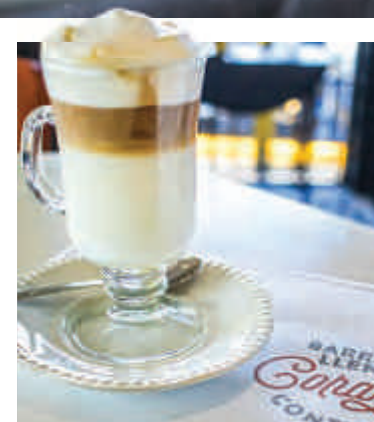

To say Cuban food runs in chef Eileen Andrade’s blood is an understatement.

Andrade is the granddaughter of Islas Canarias Restaurant founder Raul Garcia. The legendary Cuban restaurant—which many argue has the best croquetas in town—is part of the inspiration behind Andrade’s new cozy Cuban diner, Amelia’s 1931, which was named after her grandmother Amelia Garcia.

“My grandmother, Amelia, was known for her counter service and delicious cafecitos at my grandfather’s restaurants in Cuba and Miami,” says Andrade.

While classic Cuban dishes can be found throughout the Amelia’s 1931 menu, its new spins on traditional dishes really make it shine, like the malanga “tots” piled high with vaca frita (shredded steak) or a spin on a traditional frita (Cuban burger) topped with shoestring fries and Korean barbecue mayo and fried plantains.

The king and queen of Miami, aka Gloria and Emilio Estefan, have brought their beloved family recipes to their new eatery, Estefan Kitchen. With the glitzy Miami Design District serving as its backdrop, Estefan

Kitchen combines a hip vibe with a menu filled with reimagined versions of traditional Estefan family recipes with dishes such as lechón (pork) flatbread, braised short ribs and paella.

Cuban cuisine has even made its impact on the unlikelyst of spots: Whole Foods Market. Its newly opened Pinecrest store features a full-service restaurant, El Bocadillo, that features a mix of Latin and Caribbean flavors with plenty of Cuban highlights like crispy yuca fries, a hearty chorizo frita and even a croqueta-topped pizza that is made with croquetas supplied by Versailles.

But with all this elevation of Cuban cuisine, a chef's know-how and culinary acumen is more important than ever.

"There is no real technique to cooking Cuban food. They just throw everything in a pot," says Douglas Rodriguez, who is dubbed the "Godfather of Nuevo Latino Cuisine" and is known for OLA Restaurant (Of Latin America) in Miami Beach, Mojito

Bar & Plates at Sawgrass Mills mall and the now-shuttered Cuban-centric Yuca in Coral Gables. "So it's about adding technique and making it better. I'm just taking a modern approach with freshness and great ingredients—mixing them up differently."

"Actually, Cuban food here is more authentic and better than the food served in Cuba," he says. "The most consistent thing in Cuba is inconsistency. Sometimes it's hard to find even bread or sugar, and there are power outages."

"The mojito didn't exist here 15 years ago," Rodriguez says. "Now everywhere you go on the planet, you can get a drink with muddled fruit or herbs—a mojito. Now it's the standard behind every bar."

Still craving that Cuban sandwich? Well, Rodriguez points out it's not Cuban; it migrated from Tampa.

"The Cuban coffee window is not a Cuban thing either. It's a Miami thing," he says.

Vintage Paradise

The Antique Row Art & Design District in West Palm Beach is a mecca for antique connoisseurs.

By Krystian von Speidel and James Cubby

The Antique Row Art & Design District in West Palm Beach has become the center of the universe for antique shoppers in the know. "We love the antiques district in West Palm Beach, on South Dixie Highway between Southern Boulevard and Belvedere Road," says Simon Doonan, creative ambassador-at-large of Barneys New York, who, with designer Jonathan Adler, makes frequent visits to the district, even after moving away from the area several years ago.

The area, located in a once-forgotten neighborhood, boasts more than 52 shops and galleries offering an impressive range that includes 17th- to 20th-century antiques, period art-deco and modern furnishings, and fine and decorative arts.

DEEP IN THE DISTRICT

The variety of antique shops in the district is astounding. There's Coco House & Company (3625 South Dixie Highway, coco-houseandcompany.com) whose colorful French owner, Serge de Laville, specializes in 19th-century English bamboo furniture, chinoiserie and art deco furniture. In business for more than eight years, de Laville counts Bruce Springsteen and Kevin Kline among his celebrity clients. Gary Rubinstein Antiques (3901A South Dixie Highway, garyrubinsteinantiques.com), a favorite of top New York designers, specializes in fine 18th-, 19th- and 20th-century furniture and decorative arts with an emphasis on Italian design of the late 18th and mid-20th centuries. With two locations along South Dixie Highway, James & Jeffrey Antiques (3619 and 3713 South Dixie Highway, jamesandjeffrey.com) has become a favorite among decorators for its selection of accent pieces and 18th- and 19th-century Continental furnishings.

"The aura of Antique Row is pure eclecticism," says Gary Rubinstein, owner of Gary Rubinstein Antiques. "There is something for everyone. There are museum-quality pieces, as well as fun vintage items for the young collector.

TREASURE HUNT

While antiques rule in the district, there is also a great selection of art galleries and specialty shops such as Heath & Company Lighting (3707 South Dixie Highway, heathlighting.com) and JF Gallery.

A more recent addition to the gallery scene on Antique Row is Renata Fine Arts (3633 South Dixie Highway, renatafinearts.com), owned by Polish émigré Renata Metelska. The gallery specializes in exquisite original artworks ranging from 20th-century to contemporary American and European art, including a selection by Florida artists. Renata's next-door neighbor is Faustina Pace, owner of her eponymous business, Faustina Pace Antiques & Interiors (3635 South Dixie Highway, faustinapace.com). Pace's selection of furniture, textiles, accessories and garden accents procured from her travels to France, Sweden and Belgium reflects her easy, comfortable design sensibility.

Insider tip: Christa of Christa's South Seashells in the antique district builds beautiful masterpieces out of seashells (by the seashore?). csseashell.com

OFF THE ROW

In South of Southern (SoSo, as the neighborhood is called by locals), the eclectic array of antique shops continues.

Todd Hase (5011 South Dixie Highway, toddhase.com)

The interior designer is a favorite of young Palm Beach families thanks to an array of rattan and midcentury pieces.

Lars Bolander (5013 South Dixie Highway, larsbolander.com),

This Swedish-born interior designer's eponymous shop offers classical furniture and accessories.

Palm Beach Antique & Design Center (6910 South Dixie Highway, palmbeachantique.com)

Chock-full of sublimely edited and staged rooms, this is a must-stop for anyone looking for high-quality, midcentury and late '70s and early '80s French and Italian antiques.
